WEDNESDAY 18 JULY 2018

Peter Brown, former resident of St Lucia, will tell us how the suburb of Inala came to be, how it developed to house 23 000 post-war baby boomer families, why it gained a poor reputation, and how it today is a desirable place to live for some 14 000 multicultural residents. Photos of old retrieved from the Archives, of the boom years of the sixties, and what you will see today, will introduce us to a quite unique and interesting suburb.
