Brisbane's Early Roller Skating Rinks

This month Andrew Darbyshire will share with us his research on the early roller skating rinks in and around Brisbane. A non skater his interest was sparked by a chance drive by of the architecturally striking but now unused Inala Sports Centre. The centre opened in the late 1950s and was renowned not only for its success as a recreational venue for roller skating but also in the development of the sport. The 1970s were perhaps the heyday of roller skating at Inala and other venues but where did the public skate prior to this ?

This will be the focus of this evenings talk.

Limited room for demonstrations but bring your memories.
